Landcare Victoria Inc.

Landcare Victoria Inc partners with government to support Landcare groups in Victoria with their work to undertake and promote:

- Careful land management
- Sustainable farming
- Environmental stewardship
- Community well-being

What is Landcare in Victoria?

Landcare in Victoria encompasses more than 65% of the state, with nearly 105,000 Victorians being members of the 900 Landcare or environmental groups.

Members may be farmers, country dwellers, urbanites, students or retirees, in fact, anyone who wants to work with their neighbours to care for the place where they live and work.

Each group sets its own agenda: to combat weeds, fight rabbit infestation, improve pasture production, plant trees, restore native habitat or create a bio-link for wildlife.

Landcare facilitates community-based care for the land through land and water management practices which bring together productivity and resource protection.

What is Landcare Victoria Inc?

Landcare Victoria Incorporated (LVI) is the independent representative body for Landcare in Victoria.

LVI works for increased recognition, resourcing and support for Landcare by:

- fostering community learning and action
- participating in government policy development
- facilitating collaboration between Landcare and government bodies
- representing Victorian Landcare nationally via the National Landcare Network and its Members Council
- providing services to member groups and their staff such as incorporation protection, insurance cover, grant support, information on current issues, training and advice

LVI is governed by a volunteer Committee of Management made up of community representatives from each of Victoria's ten natural resource management regions, plus two Landcare professionals.

Advice on policy direction is provided by a Members Council, made up of four community members and one Landcare professional from each region.
